MEETING BEGINS AT BAPTIST CHURCH

Next Sunday--Series of Services
Will Be Held By Home Pastor
New Song Books

MUSIC BY A CHORUS CHOIR

The meeting at the Cloverport Baptist church will begin next Sunday and continue three weeks. Announcement folders containing a partial list of subjects have been distributed to all the families of the community. A large attendance is expected during the meeting.

PASTOR E. O. COTTRELL

The building has been put in good repair and made invitingly attractive; the new Monarch furnace has sufficient capacity to heat the building when fired properly and the electric lights are the latest thing in church lighting.

New song books will be used and a chorus choir will be organized for the meeting.

It is desired that all the singers of the town regardless of church or creed will join the chorus and assist in the music. It is hoped to make the singing especially attractive, with solos, duets, quartet and chorus numbers and good congregational singing. The pastor will do the preaching and will discuss the fundamental gospel themes, having in mind the twofold object of the enlistment of the membership in the Master's service and of reaching the unsaved.

This is the first time in the ten years service that Brother Cottrell has conducted his own meeting; heretofore he secured outside help and what he considered the best help available. But for the financial stringency and other reasons he felt it best to conduct this meeting himself.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Lay announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Zelma Lay, to Claude C. Pence, on Wednesday, Dec. 30, 1914, at Stephensport, Ky.

Mr. and Mrs. Pence will be at home after March 1, 1915, at Westville, Ohio.

Jas. McGovern Sees the Need of Rural Schools

James McGovern, of Free, Ky., was in town Saturday. He teaches at Richard's school house in Hancock county. His average daily attendance has dropped from 28 to 16. This is on account of the cold weather. "The roads are so bad too, and the children's shoes are almost worn out now," says Mr. McGovern.

"Shoes play an important part in the rural school attendance. Walking is hard on them and sometimes a child has to stay at home two or three days until the father can go to town and get him new shoes. If a child is warmly clad the weather and walking does not hurt him. These are some of Mr. McGovern's observations in teaching school."

Many Compliments of the Season Appreciated

The Breckenridge News has received a beautiful calendar from the Bank of Hardinsburg and Trust Co., with compliments of the holiday season. Attractive calendars have also been received from the McQuady Milling Co., Barksdale Hamlett, the state superintendent of Public Instruction, and the Irvington Hardware Co. and a thermometer from Irvington Milling Co.

Church Etiquette.

Printed By Request.

As long as there are churches there will be a church etiquette, and very many who would not think for a moment of offending at a social function, do not seem at all concerned when attending a sacred service. The following rules form a good foundation:

1. If possible, be on time. You need at least five minutes, after coming, to get warm or cool, to compose your body and mind, and to whisper a prayer before the service begins.
2. Never pass up aisle during prayer or Scripture reading. If you do your presence will distract the minds of many in the audience.
3. Be devout in every attitude. All whispering should be studiously avoided. Find the hymn and sing it if you can. Share the book with your neighbor.
4. If the sermon has begun, take a seat near the door, no matter if you are "at home."
5. Be thoughtful for the comforts of others. Take the inside of the pew if you are the first to enter, and leave all vacant space at the end next to the aisle.
6. Speak a bright, cheery word to as many as possible at the close of the service. If you are a stranger ask one of the ushers to introduce you to the pastor or to some of the officers of the church. This will always insure you a hearty welcome.
7. Never put on your overcoat, overshoes, or wraps during the closing hymn, and do not make a rush for the door immediately after benediction is pronounced. There should be no loud talking and jesting after the service is concluded. They are as much out of place in the house of God as in a house of mourning.—Exchange.

The District of Columbia has a surplus this year of $2,000,000, which the commissioners wished to hold and have the Federal Government appropriate $2,000,000 for its improvements.

Under the terms of the Johnson provision the District will be compelled to expend its hoarded $2,000,000 on public works and the Federal Government will be $2,000,000 "to the good."

The Johnson measure provides that hereafter Congress shall give the District of Columbia only such sums as he thinks it should have.

Mr. Johnson has worked persistently for five years in his effort to have the time-honored half-and-half provision repealed, and because of his activity in this matter he has often been severely criticised by the Washington papers. His colleagues congratulated him today on his success in piloting the measure through the house.

Bradley Wilson Will Speak in Cloverport

Bradley Wilson, of Owensboro, will address the farmers of this vicinity on the tobacco situation on Saturday, January 2, 1915, in the American theatre, in regard to opening the tobacco market in this city and opening up a house here where the farmers can have their tobacco graded to their own satisfaction. Mr. Wilson says buyers from Louisville, Owensboro and Henderson have already promised to be on hand sale days.

Cloverport has better facilities for handling tobacco than any place between Louisville and Owensboro.

The merchants and citizens are already backing up the proposition with their money and assistance.

THEATER PARTY AND DINNER

Given Last Night By the Young Society Men of This City.

The most interesting social event of the Christmas holidays was the theater party and dinner given last night by the young society men of this city in compliment to the members of the Friday Club. After seeing the moving pictures at the American, an elaborate five-course dinner was served at Gibson's. Twenty-four guests were seated at six tables, which were attractively arranged with floral centerpieces and brilliant place cards. Those invited were:

Miss Martha Miller.
Miss Susette Sawyer.
Miss Mildred Babbage.
Miss Jeannette Burns.
Miss Eloise Nolte.
Miss Martha Willis.
Miss Lenora McGavock.
Miss Virginia McGavock.
Miss Francis Sawyer.
Miss Margaret Puckett.
Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Randall.
Mr. Leonard Gregory.
Mr. Andrew Ashby.
Mr. Sterrett Ashby.
Mr. Mike Tucker.
Mr. Randall Weatherholt.
Mr. Frank Plank.
Mr. Fred Pierce.
Mr. Mario Denton.
Out of town guests:
Miss Mildred Steele.
Mr. Don Lyddan.
Mr. Eddison Gibson.
Mr. June Lawson.

Accidents of Last Week

Miss Maud Barry fell Christmas eve and broke her right arm.

Mrs. Jennie Newsom fell Monday a week ago and suffered a severe sprain in her left arm.

Mrs. J. Byrne Severs received a message Christmas eve that her father, W. G. Barrett, of Louisville, was ill from a fall.

SCHOOL EXHIBIT

Held at Irvington—Much Interest Displayed In Educational Progress In The Railroad Terminal

The teachers of the Irvington Graded and High school gave an exhibit of manual work and test papers, which was visited by large numbers of interested parents and many good citizens, who were glad to see some return for their tax investment, also by some members of the school board.

The exhibits represented the efforts of pupils of all grades and most of it was accomplished without interruption of the regular routine.

The woodwork was exceptionally good when it is considered that the work was accomplished without any equipment save those tools the boys could "beg, borrow or steal."

The Israelites did not find it easy to make bricks without straw. The relief maps were well executed as were the maps showing the varied products of different sections of the country.

Much credit is due Mrs. Kirk and the teachers in the primary grades for the excellent work in decorated book covers, calendars and drawings. Especially notable was a historical scene, worked out in paper figures, representing the landing of Columbus. A miniature ax, wedge and maul carved in wood, some exceedingly dainty bits of sewing; a two-room doll house and two excellent fruit water colors.

The test papers on various subjects in different grades were highly creditable.

An interesting exhibit is not all that is represented by this work. It stands for increased interest on the part of the pupils, the development of a wholesome school spirit and gives a showing as to the connection between school work and future life work.

Such handicraft develops fingers and brain dexterity, accuracy, the habit of close observation, attention to detail in working out plans, all of which contribute to efficiency in any line of work, be it domestic or quite otherwise.

Latest talents are discovered, which often help the boy or girl to decide whether they need a round or a square hole in which to work out their lines. The work deserves the closest attention of the school public, for the encouragement of both pupils and teachers.

There is a crying need for equipment of various kinds for manual work, domestic science and for sports.

Interested teachers and parents working in harmony will soon bring many things to pass.

Holiday Party Last Night

Mrs. J. H. Rowland gave a holiday party to the junior students of her music class last night. They were given a theater party at the American. The guests included: Elizabeth Furrow, Carrie May Jackson, Paul Edward Berry, Irene Penner, Mildred Morrison, Leonard Weatherholt, Francis Emmett Gregory, Louise and Eva May McCracken.

Dr. White and Stanley Suddarth Bitten By a Dog.

Dr. David White was bitten in the hand three times last Sunday by his dog, which he supposed to be mad.

He killed the dog and on Monday took its head to Indianapolis to have it examined. It was found to contain numerous hydrophobia bacteria. The doctor was given a treatment, and medicine will be sent him to continue to take.

Stanley Suddarth, a son of Commodore Suddarth, was also bitten by the dog and was taken to Indianapolis Wednesday for treatment. Several dogs of the neighborhood were bitten by the dog before anything was known to be wrong with it.

Christmas Party.

Miss Lula Severs gave a Christmas party Thursday afternoon in compliment to her musical students. Little gifts and greetings of the season were given each one. The dining room was attractively arranged. Refreshments were served from the table, the centerpiece being a little Christmas tree. The guests were: May Dee Chapin, Elizabeth Bishopp, Pearl Louise Boyd, Cecil and Eva Jolly, Lillian Polk, Maud Barry, Jane Lightfoot, Mary Owen Oelze, Chloa Mae Seaton, Mary and Christine Kile, Alyce Frank, Mrs. Baucum, Hugh Barrett Severs and Ernest Lee Colfin, of Tobinsport, Ind.

Scores Another Victory

Representative Ben Johnson, chairman of the Committee on the District of Columbia, scored another legislative victory today when his provision doing away with the half-and-half plan of defraying the expenses of the district was adopted by the house by a vote of 187 to 100. Soon after this vote was taken the bill was passed and sent over to the senate.

MRS. WHITFORD WRITES OF THE WAR FROM HER HOME IN LONDON, ENGLAND

The Breckenridge News has the pleasure of publishing herewith several paragraphs from a most interesting letter by Mrs. George Whitford, of London, to her sister, Mrs. Courtney P. Babbage, of this city. Mrs. Whitford writes from her home at No. 1 Eversham Road, Tottenham, London, England:

Nov. 23, 1914

"Do you read anything about the war? We hear nothing else; such topics as weather or fashions are never discussed for the past three months. London, or rather England, has been a moving mass of soldiers. There is very little business transacted except in connection with the war. The news papers are reaping a harvest, a new edition every hour—all war news—the pavements and streets full of new boys.

The thing to do is to go to the big beautiful parks to see the soldiers drill and the latest news from George Whitford is he is enlisted with the Second Contingent, Winnipeg Light Horse. Whit and Uncle George are very proud of George for joining, so glad the Whitford family is represented by the only boy that could join. I am not so sure that I am so pleased, still I am looking on the bright side and hoping it means a visit home, and by the time he has had several months drilling and it is time to go the front, the war will be ended. No doubt his land will be looked after and it will be given back to him. Percy wrote they were sorry to give George up, as they were willing to pay him higher wages than others could get, just to have him about the place on account of his cheerfulness. Mr. Whitford and the girls say they will take a back seat when mother George comes home. If he does come to England he will be a long way from London and would only be allowed off duty for a short time, say two nights and a day.

What a happy Christmas it would be if he can be here with us. We have the raisins stoned and are preparing the other fruits this week and will have our Christmas puddings boiled this week. Wish I could send you one. I will make four."

"Nov. 29th — We now have Sallie with us for several months this winter; she has given up her house for the use of a Belgian refugee family (there are thousands in England now, poor creatures, their lot is a sad one).

London Like Old Cowheel

London at night is a strange sight, or rather you cannot see for looking; instead of being brilliantly illuminated it resembles Cowheel in the times of Mr. Bohler's lantern; all lights are turned out or shaded so that only a dim light is left for traffic and pedestrians; huge, beautiful stores and shop windows have a dim light or a few candles in them, and then the awnings are pulled down so as to shade. All this is done so the German airmen and Zeppelins cannot locate London, should they try to drop bombs on important buildings.

What a terrible war this is. Even we that are so near and so hourly interested in it cannot realize the awful suffering that it is causing. I am proud that the United States has such a grand and wise ruler in (Democratic) President Wilson. Had Teddy Roosevelt been in power I think it would have been as good sport as he and the Kaiser would fancy.

I must say (but I must not let the English hear me) I feel very sorry for the Germans as a nation, but like John Bowman I hope the old Kaiser will get his "jest exerts" (just deserts) in this world and the next.

I am sorry to say Ella has lost her situation with the Gophier Diamond Co. in Regent street, the most fashionable shopping street in London, but the war frightened all the rich Americans away, so there is no one to buy diamonds at present. The company had to reduce their staff to one-third the usual number, and think after Christmas they will close two places entirely out of the four they have in Regent street. After the war, or as soon as business looks brighter, they want Ella again; she was getting a splendid salary, which is missed, especially at Christmas time.

People So Good and Generous

I will send on the photo's soon, also hope to receive one or more from you and some of the family as well. I have been looking for you for twenty years! I also hope to renew my subscription to The Breckenridge News.

Genevieve has passed all exams to become a Red Cross nurse and will be on the general postoffice staff if required. Martine and Harry are busy knitting for the soldiers; there is no end to the charity that is being done, people are so good and generous. Hilda Whitford offered her services as a nurse for the foreign service, even wanted to go the battlefield, but Lord Kitchener will not allow nurses on the field now, as he cannot be responsible for their safety, the Germans making a mark of Red Cross corps and cathedrals. Kathleen and Hilda go to foreign countries with invalids. Hilda has been to Africa twice and Kathleen to Italy twice and Flo to Egypt three times.

Do write soon a good, long newsy letter. I hope to write you Christmas greetings, but make no rash promises.

Hurrah for the United States for sending that shipload of millions of presents for the soldiers' and sailors' children, the Jason, the Santa Claus ship, landed safely here this week."

"Nov. 30, 1914—P. S.—I have been weeks in jumbling these pages, but think it wiser not to re-write or it might not go at all."

Sick Headache.

Sick headache is nearly always caused by disorders of the stomach. Correct them and the periodic attacks of sick headache will disappear. Mrs. John Bishop, of Roseville, Ohio, writes: "About a year ago I was troubled with indigestion and had sick headache that lasted for two or three days at a time. I doctored and tried a number of remedies but nothing helped me until during one of those sick spells a friend advised me to take Chamberlain's Tablets. This medicine relieved me in a short time." HENRY BOSWORTH IN RACE FOR GOVERNORSHIP IN OLD KENTUCKY

State Auditor Who Has Helped to Bring About Fairer Valuation of Franchises of Big Corporations Is a Candidate For Democratic Nomination.

RUNNING ON RECORD AS PUBLIC SERVANT

Full Day's Work For Full Day's Pay and a Square Deal In Taxation For Rich and Poor Alike In His Platform.

To the Democrats of Kentucky:
After due reflection I have fully decided to become a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor of this great state. I do this with a full sense of the high responsibility incurred, if nominated, and the obligations that will rest upon me if elected. I have been a Democrat all my life and have never voted against a party nominee. My father before me was a Democrat, and I am proud to say that I have five brothers of the same faith, all of whom have been equally loyal with myself to the Democratic faith, and I now ask that the people of this great commonwealth shall form their judgment of my character, honesty and intelligence and fitness for the office, after a critical examination of my official conduct, and after making careful inquiries of those who know me as to my reputation for honesty and fair dealing to all men, and it is for them to say whether I am entitled to a continuation of that support and of the confidence they have in the past so generously accorded me.

While acting as treasurer of the state during the fearful financial panic of 1907, I made successful disposition of the funds of the state, and my care during that critical time, as to preserve the credit of the state, without imperiling or destroying the credit of a single institution in the state and without the loss of a single dollar of the state's funds.

The auditor of the state, by virtue of his office, is chairman of the board of valuation and assessment of the state of Kentucky, which board has entrusted to it a duty which is of more importance to the people of the state than any other duty connected with that office. It is the function of that board, of which I have been chairman for the past three years, to value and assess for taxation, the franchises of all railroad companies and public service corporations doing business within the state. This character of property forms a considerable proportion of the total taxable property in the state and the amount of taxes these companies are required to pay is dependent upon the nature of the assessment made against them. That is, if the assessment of their property is too low, these corporations will not be charged with their full share of the public burden. If too high, then the owners thereof pay more than their fair proportion of the taxes of the state.

It was a matter of common report and general belief among the people of this state that the franchises of railroad companies and other corporations liable to a franchise tax had been inadequately assessed for many years, and consequently were not paying their fair proportion of the taxes due the state and the counties and cities therein. During my campaign for auditor in 1911, I pledged the people that, if elected, I would fully and fairly investigate this subject and, if I found that the franchises of these corporations were not fairly assessed, as chairman of the board I would use my power to correct any official delinquency that had theretofore existed in that respect.

Soon after entering upon my official duties as auditor I caused a careful examination to be made of the reports made by all corporations for assessment purposes to ascertain whether these corporations in the past had been adequately assessed for the purposes of finding out the truth as to the actual value of this character of property in the state.

I had this information carefully prepared, in writing, and when the time came to assess these franchises laid it before my colleagues on this board.

The result of the investigation I made of this subject showed that most of the small companies doing business in the state had previously been properly assessed; but the large corporations of the state, those with great power and political influence, had been grossly under-assessed (either by design or through incompetence). One of the most flagrant examples of favoritism extended by tended by the companies that the property of the railroad companies was assessed at more than its real value by the present board, and that the assessment against farm lands and city lots must be raised before the assessment against the property of the railroad companies could be increased.

I do not believe the farm lands of this state are generally assessed for taxation and valuation as low as one-half of their real value. If the value of the farm lands of this state should be estimated by capitalizing the net income derived therefrom on the basis of 6 per cent, which method is employed to find the value of railroad property, it would be demonstrated that real estate at present is assessed at approximately the full value thereof. In other words, if the same mode or method of ascertaining value should be applied to find the value of real estate it would be shown that real estate is assessed at its full value. The court, preliminary to its ruling an injunction, required these companies to pay on a valuation greatly in excess of any sum they had paid on in previous years. The aggregate increase in the amount of taxes paid by these companies in the year 1912 over the year 1911 was about $125,000. In the years 1913 and 1914 a like sum was collected from these companies. During the three years of my administration these four companies have paid to the state $375,000 more in taxes than was paid by them during a like period of time under the administration of my immediate predecessors. These suits now pending, when decided, will determine finally the amount of taxes these companies will have to pay annually to the state in the future, and the question of the real value of this property will no longer be open to discussion.

It is important that the question of value of these franchises should be judicially determined and forever settled, because the belief has prevailed in this state among all the people for some years that the big corporations of the state were always active in politics of the two dominant parties in the state, with the end in view of being favored in the assessment of their franchises. With franchises of corporations assessed at their real value, as they should be, the corporations will be taken out of politics in this state, as they ought to be.

As auditor of the state for the past three years I have also been a member of the sinking fund commission of the state and, having information gained while acting in that capacity, I believe I am thoroughly familiar with the fiscal affairs of the state.

I am in favor of and, if elected, will advocate the passage of a law that will require that all state supplies used at all state institutions to be purchased by the competitive bidding system, and that the lowest open bid for supplies furnished all institutions be accepted, and I believe the state could easily save $100,000 a year by inaugurating such a system.

I am in favor of and will work for, if elected governor, the establishment of a system of taxation that will be fair and just to rich and poor alike, and that will cause the lifting of personal property for taxation, which now, because of the rate of taxation in many taxing districts, does not pay any taxes at all, and that will place the burden of taxation where it belongs, on those best able to bear it. I am in favor of such legislation, or of a constitutional amendment, it necessary, to put a fixed and definite limit upon the rate of taxation in Kentucky, a step which I believe will cause our officials to follow a policy of economy and efficiency in the handling of the people's funds.

I am opposed to the convict labor system and favor the abolition of the present contract system and the elimination of the competition with organized labor that is the direct result of it. I am in favor of the use of convicts to produce what is needed by the state institutions and of the purchase of a farm on which they may labor in the open air to produce the foods needed in these institutions.

I am in thorough sympathy with the farmer, having been a farmer and living on a farm all my life. I will do all I can as governor for the great agricultural interests of Kentucky and the men and women engaged in it. As long as the farmer is prosperous every other interest in the state is prosperous, and all her people share in disaster to them as well as in their prosperity.

If I am elected governor I will do all I can to further the good roads movement and all that is possible to secure a liberal appropriation for the schools and their continued improvement.

If the people want for governor of the state a man who will devote his time and what talents he may have entirely to their welfare, without regard to any future political preference (for I believe there can be no higher office, certainly no higher honor, than the governorship of the state in which I was born and reared), then I want the nomination. There is no reason why the officials of the state should fail to give to the state the same devotion to duty as is exacted by any business corporation of its employees, and I promise the people not only to devote that time myself to their interests, but, so far as I may have the power to see that every other employee in executive departments of the state government does the same. A full day's work for a full day's pay will be the motto followed in the governor's office if I am elected, and it will apply to all the other departments over which I may have even the semblance of control or influence. Our General Stock-Reducing Sale Beginning Dec. 28--Continuing a Week!

With the close of the holiday season each year, we find it desirable to institute a general sale for the purpose of reducing as far as possible the quantity of stock on hand. Since an inventory of goods on shelves is taken shortly after New Year an effort is always made by our department managers to have the amount of merchandise on hand appear at the very lowest. So as soon as the Christmas rush is over, there is a tremendous drop in prices, with the object of making a rapid disposition of the goods. Consequently, if one is in need of any of the hundred useful articles with which a store of this size abounds are to be obtained. Therefore it behooves you to take a train to Louisville, with J. Bacon & Sons as your objective point. You will find that all the goods offered at this sale are neither more nor less than our regular stock and are not clean-ups, left-overs or other undesirable merchandise. So come in on the first day if possible and lay in a supply of high-grade staple household goods, of the kind that are indispensable. You will find Warm, Heavy Blankets, Soft Comforts, Good Table Cloths, Handsome Floor Coverings, Dependable Furniture, Strong, Sturdy Chairs, Women's Suits and Coats from the center of fashion, notions that are needed every minute, Kitchenware and house-furnishings and a world of others—too many to mention.

HAPPY WOMEN

Plenty of Them in Cloverport. and Good Reason for It.

Wouldn't any woman be happy, After years of backache suffering, Days of misery, nights of unrest, The distress of urinary troubles, When she finds freedom.

Many readers will profit by the following. Mrs. W. N. Bartlett, 629 Triplett St., Owensboro, Ky., says: "For a long time I had nearly every symptom of kidney disease. My back ached terribly and at night I didn't sleep well. During the day I was nervous and in bed all the time. My feet became swollen and I knew that I required a good remedy to cure me. I had often heard Doan's Kidney Pills highly recommended, so I got a supply and began taking them as directed. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me and they are the only remedy I will ever use for kidney trouble. I can highly recommend them, as they lived up to the claims made for them."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Bartlett had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

IS IT WORTH WHILE TO GO?

The New York State Factory Investigating Committee has held an investigation to ascertain how girls and women keep soul and body together on wages ranging from $4.50 to $9 a week. Testimonies were given out by the girls themselves. "There were stories told, first hand stories, of young women and old who have worked and are working today for such a pittance that they can afford to eat only two meals a day," and experiences were given which showed that many girls found they must subtract meat from their meals for weeks in order to buy a pair of shoes.

The saddest part of all is that many of these girls are those who have left peaceful and comfortable homes in the country and small towns. Is it worth while to go to the city to work for such a pitiful wage? There are so many ways to make a plain, good living at home. A girl had better live on less and work for those who love her. If she is a good manager she can succeed at home where ever she finds employment. Sometimes it may be in the nearest business office, in the kitchen at home, or at her own sewing machine or piano. When making plans for the New Year, try at home first.

NEW YEAR'S DAY.

Friday is the first day of the New Year. We should spend it just as happy as possible—not necessarily in gay and festive entertaining, but in pleasant thinking and helpful association. In France it is the great day of calling and present making, of renewing ties of friendship and acquaintance, and in other countries of the war zone much has heretofore been made of the day. In New York celebrations of seeing the New Year in, replaces the old custom of New Year calls. But in small towns and rural communities the calling system is still carried on. Going to see friends and relatives brings about a kindly feeling, and people should not drop the old fashioned calls for other social entertainments. Calling is always delightful for calls bring out company manners and display the very best of dispositions. This is helpful and pleasant, makes the first day of the New Year bright and promising for the 364 days to follow.

OPPORTUNITIES AT HAND FOR MERCHANTS NOW.

Plan your January Clearance Sales now. Don't keep old goods on hands. It goes out of style, it will soon rot. Let it go if you have to sell it at a loss, for you will have to keep it at a loss to yourself or customer. We want you to advertise your sales. Even a small ad. will help you to make your sale a success. There are great opportunities at hand for merchants even these cold days. Plan and think about the goods in your store, see what you can let go in a January clearance sale. The customers of Pete Sheeran, Bros. & Co., Kirk; of B. F. Beard & Co., Hardinsburg; of Wm. Davis, McQuady, will be interested in the splendid values they are quoting this week in their half-page clearance sale ads.

"Church Etiquette," an article on the front page of this issue, is printed by request. It will do us all good to practice it. If any church should like to have a copy of this to frame, we should be pleased to mail you one printed on white card board. Write not later than this week, if you want one.

In their Christmas sermons more than 2,000 New York ministers, representing all denominations, spoke of the needs of the starving Belgians. Cloverport may contribute to these poor people by taking any amount to Mr. Paul Lewis.

"Money In Hogs," is an excellent prize article, written from experience, by our good friend, Mr. R. Sidney Owen, of Valley Home Stock Farm.

Mrs. George Whitford, of London, who was Miss Ella Hambleton, of Cloverport, writes clearly and gracefully of the war zone in this issue.

Are you reading the Million Dollar Mystery? A million dollars was always a mystery to us.

"It Pays to Advertise," is one of the most popular plays in New York this winter.

Have you said "thank you" yet for that Christmas gift?

Good-bye to 1914.

MERCANTILE MARINE LOSS

One of the Items of Woeful Waste Wrought by War.

London (Special)—A detailed statement issued by the board of trade asserts that after sixteen weeks of war, 1,063 German steamers representing a large percentage of Germany's mercantile marine have been captured, detained or have sought refuge in port. In the same period 195 British ships have similarly been removed from the mercantile service, representing 2.9 per cent of the British mercantile marine.

"A Poor Poet."

One afternoon Browning went to call on Lady Kinloch and missed his way. A lady was standing on her doorstep, and he asked her to direct him to the house. She could not tell him, but offered to look it up for him in the directory and took him into the house, produced a directory, and together they found out what he wanted to know, and then she came out to the doorstep again so that she could point out to him the direction he had to take. He thanked her, went down the steps, hesitated and then turned and came back to her, saying: "Perhaps you may like to know to whom you have been so kind. I am a poor poet, and my name is Robert Browning."—Westminster Gazette.

Doan's Regulets are recommended by many who say they operate easily, without griping and without bad after effects. 25c at all drug stores.

Mr. Irwin No Better

A gloom was cast over the Henderson Route Christmas day over the critical illness of Mr. Irwin, president and general manager of the road. Word comes as The Breckenridge News goes to press that he is no better and his recovery doubtful.

A Trick of Oratory.

Victor Murock says that the best advice he ever received in regard to public speaking was from a hack driver. After making one of his maiden speeches in Kansas he was being driven to the railway station by the police liveryman.

"Like the speech?" asked Victor. "Yeh," answered the driver, "only you'd get more hand claps if you'd all ways put the names at the last when you say anything."

Victor didn't understand, so the driver explained:

"You spoke of Henry Clay and Grant and James G. Blaine and then went on to tell about what they did. You ought to go over the things they did and then say, 'That's what was done by Clay and Grant and James G. Blaine.' Always put the names last and the crowd'll take more interest."—New York Sun.

There is Money in Hogs

By R. Sidney Owen (In Inland Farmer) First Prize Article, $5.00

There are too many people who can see a profit in hog raising only when they are on a "boom" as to prices and when a period of low prices prevails want to quit the business and take up some other line of farming. Every business must have its "downs" as well as its "ups," and just now is the best time ever for people in the South to take up the breeding of good hogs, not only because of a depression in prices that will enable them to get foundation stock comparatively cheap, but to offset the low price of cotton, etc.

Someone has said that a hog can root the mortgage off any farm if there is enough of him and he is given a fair chance, and we believe this to be almost literally true, for no animal that is grown on our farms gives greater returns for initial cost than the "lowly pig" if given good treatment.

The hog is somewhat of a scavenger and it is this ability to look after his own interests and to be able to live where many other animals would starve that has rendered him unpopu- lar with some few fastidious persons who have not really made a study of his lordship, the great American hog. He it said, however, that while the average hog will eat most anything any other animal will eat, he has his choice of foods and is as great an epicure as some of his two-legged brothers.

The question is often asked as to which breed of hogs is most profitable. As well for a young man to ask if he should marry a girl with raven or golden tresses or one with a nose decidedly aquiline or slightly pugy; it is merely a matter of taste or fancy. All the pure breeds are good, and while some one breed may suit a certain locality better than another, the fact remains that good money can be made anywhere with any of the standards or well-known breeds of hogs if properly cared for.

The "buy-a-bale-of-cotton" movement is all right, but the "buy-a-pig" movement is better just now, and while you are buying better buy a good one. If you want a "cheap John" pig you can get it at home and at a low price and save expressage. Better buy it at home anyway if you can get as good as you can buy elsewhere and thus help the home breeder and yourself by keeping your money at home.

Now that we have bought the pig, let's see about the best method of feeding him, or rather, the best method of letting him feed himself, for it is his ability to feed and care for himself that makes him so valuable an asset on the farm. Of course you must provide plenty of the different kinds of feed that he loves and give him free access to it and he will do the rest.

You can grow a pig artificially, as you do flowers and plants, the hut-house variety, but we want the kind that any farmer can grow under ordinary farm conditions and we suggest that the first thing to provide is plenty of pasture and for all the year round, clover and grass in summer and fall and clover, rye and other winter cover crops in winter and spring. Rape is splendid for summer and fall pasture. A few years ago we had rape, sorghum and cowpeas in same field and it would have done you good to see how those hogs, old and young, went from one plot to another and the way they gained was marvelous. Of course, in our northern states hogs must be fed some grain in winter and must be provided with shelter, but in most of the southern states the question of shelter is a small item.

Hogs will drink any kind of slop, but they love a fresh drink and should ever have access to clear running water if possible. Peanuts are said to be fine for hogs and apples are splendid; peaches better and hogs can live on clover of most any variety. Our sows ran on grass and clover this past summer and ate the apples and had a very little corn, and suckled fair-sized litters and came through to fall in good healthy condition. Of course the pigs were not as large as if we had fed them heavily on grain, but they were healthy and strong and ready to take on weight when we began feeding them this fall. These sows will be kept in a woods pasture a part of the winter, for when the ground is muddy and wet and cold they do better in the woods. They find many insects, etc., in the woods and seem to keep well there, as the leaves make an ideal place to root and for making beds. A large house is provided for shelter in

Another Cured By LIV-VER-LAX

The City Commissioner of Terrell, Texas, a former Greenville citizen, writes:

April 9, 1914.

"I take pleasure in saying for publication that by the use of Liv-Ver-Lax I have been cured of a disease which is correctly described by the recognized symptoms of Biliousness, Stomach and Liver Trouble, Constipation and resulting complications, and commend its use to all like sufferers."

George H. Jackson.

L. E. Griffith, Witness.

Mr. Jackson, like hundreds of others, has discovered the beneficial result of Liv-Ver-Lax, the wonderful vegetable Liver Tonic. Harmless, safe for any child; has no injurious after-effects like calomel. Pleasant to take; no nausea.

Take regular and keep well. 50c and $1 at druggists or from Lebanon Co-Operative Medicine Company, Lebanon, Tenn.—Kincheloe's Pharmacy.

very bad weather, but we notice that in ordinary weather they prefer a bed in the open, piling up the leaves. Of course we feed grain regularly when in the woods. We use wheat middlings and corn and have fed tankage with good results, and where one can get milk to mix with the middlings it is an ideal feed. Also, we keep a supply of black strap molasses and mix a little of this with the slop and we consider it as cheap a feed as one can buy. Of course we do not depend on the molasses save as a relish and conditioner. It is cheap and we believe the day is near when molasses will be fed to all kinds of stock in one form or another.

Now, as to cooking a hog's food, if you have never done so, do not begin, and if you have been cooking the food quit, for a hog has nothing else to do save to eat and grow and the wise Creator gave him a good set of grinders that will last as long as his average life, and we really believe that hogs do better on uncooked food. Shade is essential in very warm weather, but hogs like the sunshine and must have it to be healthy. If you doubt this give them a chance in cold weather and they will seek the sunny side of the barn or pen.

Our aim is to grow hogs till the proper age to fatten and then put the flesh on in a hurry. We have put as much as three pounds a day on a fair-sized hog that was in a thrifty condition and after we got him started, but one and a half to two pounds a day is a fair gain. Of course where only a few hogs are kept and much slop, etc., may be had, one can grow them rapidly from the first and just here we will say that we believe a few hogs well cared for will return a greater profit than a larger herd that cannot be properly fed and cared for. Hogs must be kept free of lice and worms. Worms are worse than lice and cost the farmer good dollars. There are many remedies for worms. Most any of the advertised foods and tonics will get the worms. Wood ashes and charcoal will help. Any good dip will get the lice if used several times, or some kind of oil is good.

Just a few closing words. Get good foundation stock of any breed you may fancy and select the best pigs for breeding purposes. Cull them closely and sell the runts and inferior animals for pork. Some folks ask me if it pays to keep pure bred hogs. To all such inquirers I answer it depends on nerve and perseverance as to whether there is more money in pure-bred animals than in good but not necessarily registered stock. It costs no more to breed the pure-breds than the others and the extra good ones can usually be sold for breeding purposes at a higher price than pork hogs and the culls are usually better than the best scrubs. As to how much you will make on your pure-bred animals depends on your nerve as an advertiser and your honesty in dealing with your customers. You can "put off" a bad pig on a man one time, but rarely can you repeat the performance. Better tell a straight story about the animal and if there are some slight defects as to points or conformation tell this also and then the man has no "come-back" if he is not pleased.

The world is going to be meat hungry ere long and the United States being the only big nation not at war must be prepared to feed other nations as well as her own big family and the man who has plenty of good animals need not worry about the market. The prophets say that prosperity is just around the corner, so let us be ready to "hand out" a few slices of ham and pork chops when prosperity comes in Kentucky.

How To Give Quinine To Children.

FERRELIN is the trade-mark name given to an Improved Quinine. It is a Tasteless Syrup, pleasant to take and does not disturb the stomach. Children take it and never know it is Quinine. Also especially adapted to adults who cannot take ordinary Quinine. Does not nauseate or cause nervousness nor ringing in the head. Try it the next time you need Quinine for any purpose. Christmas Gratitude to Germany

To the Editor of The Sun—Sir: In the midst of this persistent vilification of everything German, the Kaiser, the government, the professors, the mode of thinking, may I point out that there is one German practice which we should be very loath to relinquish; I mean that of the Christmas tree. This charming custom, so deeply rooted in the poetic fancy of the Germanic people, was introduced into England by the late Prince Consort, and having received the seal of English approval, soon passed over to America, where it has remained ever since to the pleasure of all concerned.

This will be a tragic Christmas for the inhabitants of the fatherland, but I doubt not that trees, large and small, will be lighted as usual in every household, even if countless beloved faces are absent from the family circles.

Can we not, at least on Christmas eve, give a grateful thought to the nation which has added so much to the joys of childhood, by its fairy tales, its Santa Claus and its Christmas trees.

Community Christmas

Tree Given at Free.

A beautiful community Christmas tree was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Taul, of Free, Ky., Christmas eve. Mrs. Taul writes the following letter to the Cloverport Choral Club: "We received your nice boxes for the tree and all were pleased. As the night was so bad, not so many were present, but today I have fixed boxes to send to those absent. Everyone thought the tree was one of the prettiest ever seen. Thirty-eight were present. We moved everything out of my parlor and put up the tree. I wish to thank the club for the beautiful Christmas you have made for our community for the little children. Everybody had a grand time. Mrs. Chas. Viera and Mrs. Lloyd Wright, of Illinois, also sent gift boxes for the tree. Those who assisted Mr. and Mrs. Taul were: Marvin Basham, Stewart Babbage, Jessie Bates, James McGovern, Bishop Rice, Inez Wells, William Taul, Lillie Bates, Pear Basham, Minnie Bates, Bessie Bates, Lena Rice, Louise Rice, Thomas Rice, Bennie Taul, Wm. Taul and Mrs. Wells.

Several members of the Choral Club hope to have a community Christmas tree for Cloverport next year.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy—The Mother's Favorite.

"I give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to my children when they have colds or coughs," writes Mrs. Verne Shaffer, Vandergrift, Pa. It always helps them and is far superior to any other cough medicine I have used. I advise anyone in need of such a medicine to give it a trial." For sale by all dealers.

The Million Dollar Mystery

By HAROLD MAC GRATH

It was an odd whim. He had not entered a Broadway restaurant in all these years. He was unknown. He belonged to no clubs. Two months was the longest time he had ever remained in New York since the disposal of his old home in Madison avenue and his resignation from his clubs. This once, then, he would break the law he had written down for himself. Boldly he entered the restaurant.

Some time before Hargrave surrendered to the restless spirit of rebellion, bitterly to repent for it later, there came into this restaurant a man and a woman. They were both evidently well known, for the head waiter was obsequious and hurried them over to the best table he had left and took the order himself.

The man possessed a keen, intelligent face. You might have marked him for a successful lawyer, for there was an earnestness about his expression which precluded a life of idleness. His age might have been anywhere between 40 and 50. The shoulders were broad and the hands which lay clasped upon the table were slim but muscular. Indeed, everything about him suggested hidden strength and vitality. His companion was small, handsome, and animated. Her frequent gestures and mutable eyebrows betrayed her foreign birth. Her age was a matter of importance to no one but herself.

They were at coffee when she said: "There's a young man coming toward us. He is looking at you."

The man turned. Instantly his face lighted up with a friendly smile of recognition.

"Who is it?" she asked.

"A chap worth knowing; a reporter just a little out of the ordinary. I'm going to introduce him. You never can tell. We might need him some day. Ah, Norton, how are you?"

"Good evening, Mr. Braine." The reporter, catching sight of a pair of dazzling eyes, hesitated.

"The Princess Perigoff, Norton. You're in no hurry, are you?"

"Not now," smiled the reporter.

"Ah!" said the princess, interested. It was the old compliment, said in an unusual way. It pleased her.

The reporter sank into a chair. When inactive he was rather a dreamy-eyed sort of chap. He possessed that rare accomplishment of talking upon one subject and thinking upon another at the same time. So while he talked gaily with the young woman on varied themes, his thoughts were busy speculating upon her companion. He was quite certain that the name Braine was assumed, but he was also equally certain that the man carried an extraordinary brain under his thatch of salt and pepper hair. The man had written three or four brilliant monographs on poisons and the uses of radium, and it was through and by these that the reporter had managed to pick up his acquaintance. He lived well, but inconspicuously.

Suddenly the pupils of Braine's eyes narrowed; the eye became cold. Over the smoke of his cigarette he was looking into the wall mirror. A man had passed behind him and sat down at the next table. Still gazing into the mirror, Braine saw Norton wave his hand; saw also the open wonder on the reporter's pleasant face.

"Who is your friend, Norton?" Braine asked indifferently, his head still turned.

"Stanley Hargrave. Met him in Hongkong when I was sent over to handle a part of the revolution. War correspondence stuff. First time I ever ran across him on Broadway at night. We've since had some powwows over some rare books. Queer old cock; brave as a lion, but as quiet as a mouse."

"Bookish, eh? My kind. Bring him over." Underneath the table Braine maneuvered to touch the foot of the princess.

"I don't know," said the reporter dubiously. "He might say no, and that would embarrass the whole lot of us. He's a bit of a hermit. I'm surprised to see him here."

"Try," urged the princess. "I like to meet men who are hermits."

"I haven't the least doubt about that," the reporter laughed. "I'll try; but don't blame me if I'm rebuffed."

He left the table with evident reluctance and approached Hargrave. The two shook hands cordially, for the elder man was rather fond of this medley of information known as Jim Norton.

"Sit down, boy; sit down. You're just the kind of a man I've been wanting to talk to tonight."

"Wouldn't you rather talk to a pretty woman?"

"I'm an old man."

"Bah! That's a hypocritical bluff, and you know it. My friends at the next table have asked me to bring you over."

"I do not usually care to meet strangers."

"Make an exception this once," said the reporter, who had seen Braine's eyes change and was curious to know why the appearance of Hargrave in the mirror had brought about that metallic gleam. Here were two unique men; he desired to see them face to face.

"This once. My fault; I ought not to be here; I feel out of place. What a life, though, you reporters lead! To meet kings and presidents and great financiers, socialists and anarchists, the whole scale of life, and to ship these people on the back as if they were everyday friends!"

"Now you're making fun of me. For one king there are always twenty thick brogans ready to kick me down the steps; don't forget that."

Hargrave laughed. "Come, then; let us get it over with."

The introductions were made. Norton felt rather chagrined. So far as he could see, the two men were total strangers. Well, it was all in the game. Nine out of ten opportunities for the big story were fake alarms; but he was always willing to risk the labor these nine entailed for the sake of the tenth.

At length Braine glanced at his watch, and the princess nodded. Adieux were said. Inside the taxicab Braine leaned back with a deep, audible sigh.

"What is it?" she asked.

"The luck of the devil's own," he said. "Child of the Steppes, for years I've flown about seas and continents, through valleys and over mountains—for what? For the sight of the face of that man we have just left. At first glance I wasn't sure; but the sound of his voice was enough. Olga, the next time you see that reporter, throw your arms around his neck and kiss him. What did I tell you? Without Norton's help I would not have been sure. I'm going to leave you at your apartment."

"The man of the Black Hundred?" she whispered.

"The man who deserted and defied the Black Hundred, who broke his vows, and never paid a kopeck for the privilege; the man who had been appointed for the supreme work and who ran away. In those days we needed men of his stamp, and to accomplish this end..."

"There was a woman," she interrupted, with a touch of bitterness.

"Always the woman. And she was as clever and handsome as you are."

"Thanks. Sometimes..."

"Ah, yes!" ironically. "Sometimes you wish you could settle down, marry and have a family! Your domesticity would last about a month."

She made no retort because she recognized the truth of this statement.

"There's an emerald I know of," he said ruminatively. "It's quite possible that you may be wearing it within a few days."

"I am mad over them. There is something in the green stone that fascinates me. I can't resist it."

"That's because, somewhere in the far past, your ancestors were orientals. Here we are. I'll see you tomorrow. I must hurry. Good-night."

She stood on the curb for a moment and watched the taxicab as it whirled around a corner. The man held her with a fascination more terrible than any jewel. She knew him to be a great and daring rogue, cunning, patient, fearless. Packed away in that mind of his there were a thousand accomplished deeds which had roused the police of two continents. Braine! She could have laughed. The very name he had chosen was an insolence directed at society.

The subject of her thoughts soon arrived at his destination. A flight of stairs carried him into a dimly lighted hall, smelling evilly of escaping gas. He donned a black mask and struck the door with a series of light blows; two, then one, then three, and again one. The door opened and he slipped inside. Round a table sat several men, also masked. They were all tried and trusted rogues; but not one of them knew what Braine looked like. He alone remained unknown save to the man designated as the chief, who was only Braine's lieutenant. The mask was the insignia of the Black Hundred, an organization with all the ramifications of the Camorra without their abiding stupidity. From the assassination of a king, down to the robbery of a country post office, nothing was too great or too small for their nets. Their god dwells in the hearts of all men and is called greed.

The ordinary business over, the chief dismissed the men, and he and Braine alone remained.

"Vroom, I have found him," said Braine.

"There are but few; which one?"

"Eighteen years ago, in St. Petersburg."

"I remember. The millionaire's son. Did he recognize you?"

"I don't know. Probably he did. But he always had good nerves. He is being followed at this moment. We shall strike quick; for if he recognized me he will not quick. He is cool and brave. You remember how he braved us that night in Russia. Jumped boldly through the window at the risk of breaking his neck. He landed safely; that is the only reason he eluded us. Millions—and they slipped through our fingers. If I could only find some route to his heart! The lure we held out to him is dead."

"Or in the fortress, which is the same thing. What are your plans?"

"I have in mind something like this."

And Hargrave was working out his plans, too; and he was just as much of a general as Braine. He sat at his library table, the maxillary muscles in his jaws working. So they had found him? Well, he had broken the law of his own making and he must suffer the consequences. Braine, who was Menshikov in Russia, Schwartz in Germany, Mendoza in Spain, Cartucci in Italy, and Du Bois in France; so the rogue had found him out? Poor fool that he had been! High spirited, full of those youthful dreams of doing good in the world, he had joined what he had believed a great secret socialist movement, to learn that he had been trapped by a band of brilliant thieves. Kidnapers and assassins for hire; the Black Hundred; fiends from Tophet! For nearly eighteen years he had eluded them, for he knew that directly or indirectly they would never cease to hunt for him; and an idle whim had toppled him into their clutches.

He wrote several letters feverishly. The last was addressed to Miss Susan Farlow and read: "Dear Madam: Send Florence Gray to New York, to arrive here Friday morning. My half of the bracelet will be identification. I enclosed find cash to square accounts." He would get together all his available funds, recover his child, and fly to the ends of the world. He would tire them out. They would find that the peaceful dog was a bad animal to rouse. He rang for the faithful Jones.

"Jones, they have found me," he said simply.

"You will need me, then?"

"Quite possible. Please mail these and then we'll talk it over. No doubt some one is watching outside. Be careful."

"Very good, sir."

Hargrave bowed his head in his hand. They might kill him; there was a chance of their accomplishing that; but never should they touch his daughter's fortune.

"Jones, you go to the rear door and I'll take a look out of the front. We have an hour. I know the breed. They'll wait till midnight and then force their way in."

Hargrave saw a dozen shadows in the front yard.

"Men all about the back yard," whispered Jones down the hall.

The master eyed the man.

"Very well, sir," replied the latter, with understanding. "I am ready."

The master went to the safe, emptied it of its contents, crossed the hall to the bedroom, and closed the door softly behind him, Jones having entered the same room through another door to be fool any possible watcher. After a long while, perhaps an hour, the two men emerged from the room from the same doors they had entered. So whispered the watcher to his friends below.

"Hargrave is going upstairs."

"Let him go. Let him take a look at us from the upper windows. He will understand that nothing but wings will save him."

Silence. By and by a watcher reported that he heard the scuffle of the roof rattle.

"Look!" another cried, startled.

A bluish glare came from the roof.

"He's shooting off a Roman candle!"

They never saw the man-made bird till it alighted upon the roof. They never thought of shooting at it till it had taken wing! Then they rushed the doors of the house. They made short work of Jones, whom they tied up like a Christmas fowl and plumped roughly into a chair. They broke open the safe, to find it empty. And while the rogues were rummaging about the room, venting their spite upon many a treasure they could neither appreciate nor understand, a man from the outside burst in.

"The old man is dead and the money is at the bottom of the ocean! We punctured her. She's gone!"

A thin, inscrutable smile stirred the lips of the man bound to the chair.

born her out of his me completely. The happiness of watching the child grow into girlhood he had denied himself. She at least would be safe. Only when she was safe in a far country would he dare tell her. He tried in vain to conjure up a picture of her; he always saw the mother whom he had loved and hated with all the ardor of his youth.

Many things happened the next day. There was a visit to the hangar of one William Orts, the aviator, famous for his daredevil exploits. There were two visitors, in fact, and the second visitor was knocked down for his pains. He had tried to bribe Orts.

There were several excited bankers, who protested against such large withdrawals without the usual formal announcement. But a check was a check and they had to pay.

Hargrave covered a good deal of ground, but during all this time his right hand never left the automatic in his overcoat pocket, except at those moments when he was obliged to sign his checks. He would shoot and make inquiries afterward.

Far away a young girl and her companion got on the train which was to carry her to New York, the great dream city she was always longing to see.

And the spider wove his web. Hargrave reached home at night. He put the money in the safe and was telephoning when Jones entered and handed his master an unstamped note.

"Where did you get this?"

"At the door, sir. I judge that the house is surrounded."

Hargrave read the note. It stated briefly that all his movements during the day had been noted. It was known that he had collected a million in paper money. If he surrendered this he would be allowed twenty-four hours before the real chase began. Otherwise he should die before midnight. Hargrave crushed the note in his hand. They might kill him; there was a chance of their accomplishing that; but never should they touch his daughter's fortune.

"Jones, you go to the rear door and I'll take a look out of the front. We have an hour. I know the breed. They'll wait till midnight and then force their way in."

Hargrave saw a dozen shadows in the front yard.

"Men all about the back yard," whispered Jones down the hall.

The master eyed the man.

"Very well, sir," replied the latter, with understanding. "I am ready."

The master went to the safe, emptied it of its contents, crossed the hall to the bedroom, and closed the door softly behind him, Jones having entered the same room through another door to be fool any possible watcher. After a long while, perhaps an hour, the two men emerged from the room from the same doors they had entered. So whispered the watcher to his friends below.

"Hargrave is going upstairs."

"Let him go. Let him take a look at us from the upper windows. He will understand that nothing but wings will save him."

Silence. By and by a watcher reported that he heard the scuffle of the roof rattle.

"Look!" another cried, startled.

A bluish glare came from the roof.

"He's shooting off a Roman candle!"

They never saw the man-made bird till it alighted upon the roof. They never thought of shooting at it till it had taken wing! Then they rushed the doors of the house. They made short work of Jones, whom they tied up like a Christmas fowl and plumped roughly into a chair. They broke open the safe, to find it empty. And while the rogues were rummaging about the room, venting their spite upon many a treasure they could neither appreciate nor understand, a man from the outside burst in.

"The old man is dead and the money is at the bottom of the ocean! We punctured her. She's gone!"

A thin, inscrutable smile stirred the lips of the man bound to the chair.

Male Bird a Factor in Helping in Heavy Egg Production.

In a recent issue of Farm and Fireside B. F. W. Thorpe, associate editor of that publication, writes a practical article which gives the poultry producer valuable ideas as to how he may increase his egg yield. Mr. Thorpe says that the recent discoveries of Dr. Raymond Pearl, an expert in these matters, bids fair to double the egg production of the flocks of many poultrymen. In the following extract taken from Mr. Thorpe's article Dr. Pearl's findings are given in very brief and simple form:

"Instead of thinking of the hen as being the main factor in helping to get heavy egg production, Dr. Pearl's experiments prove that the male bird must be considered of prime importance. The hen does not endow her daughters directly with an inheritance that will insure her being a heavy producer of eggs. The father of the pullets must be depended on to endow his daughters with the tendency to lay a large number of eggs. But in order to get the desired heavy egg producers the male must be the son of a heavy-laying mother, or, as stated in another way, the daughter cannot inherit a heavy laying propensity from her mother, but gets that quality indirectly from her grandmother."

"My belief is strong that any painstaking poultryman can make over his flock from ordinary layers into heavy producers by merely adopting these same principles of breeding."

"If you have in your flock a hen that has produced 175 eggs or more in a year or can get such a hen of the variety preferred to mate with a pedigree male such as I have recommended, you will be nearer the egg goal sought than is he who procures only a male bird bred for increase of egg production."

MARKET GARDENING.

The European war has already affected the price of vegetable seeds. If it continues for a year the situation with reference to the supply of certain seeds will be serious. For example, practically all of the seed of self-blanching varieties of celery is grown in France. California produces good seed of green varieties, but has failed to grow superior seed of self-blanching kinds. On account of a limited supply of imported seed our American growers may be compelled to plant largely of green varieties, and this would please consumers because it would mean a product of higher quality. Celery growers who desire to plant Golden Self-Blanching or other varieties of this type next year will do well to order seed at once. Most of our radish seed also comes from France. It has been grown there largely because of the lower cost of labor. It has been clearly demonstrated that radish seed of the highest quality may be grown in this country. In fact, a grower here and there will not trust the commercial sources, but breeds his own seed with the greatest care. There is no reason why every gardener should not produce his own radish seed, and our American seed growers could also produce seed of superior merit.

Most of the Danish Ball Head cabbage seed used in this country comes from Denmark. The war will undoubtedly affect the price of this seed, and it is important to order seed as soon as possible. Danish Ball seed of the finest quality, however, may be obtained from American growers.

New rhubarb plantations may be started in the fall of the year if the soil is well drained. It is customary to use the smallest and healthiest roots of old plants, which are dug and divided. If the hills can be covered this fall with rotten manure winter protection will be given, and the added fertility will be of great value to the young plants when growth starts next spring. — National Stockman and Farmer.

1,500,000 Men Killed Wounded and Missing!

This is the astounding report of the losses in the GERMAN ranks alone, not taking into consideration those of FRANCE, ENGLAND, SERBIA, RUSSIA or BELGIUM. Think of it, just lacks 750,000 men being as many men as there are men, women and children in the State of Kentucky, and is as many men as there are men, women and children in the Great City of Philadelphia, Pa.

Traveling In The South

Dear Mr. Babbage: As Mr. Bates and I are enjoying a pleasure trip in the south and the first extensive vacation for a number of years I thought I would write a few lines to inform my old friends of some impressions we have received.

We left our home in Athens, O., about noon, Wednesday, Dec. 9. We spent the first night in Cincinnati. The next day and night we spent at Beaver Lick, Ky., with my uncle, John Sam Noell, who is very ill and not likely to last many days. From Friday till Monday we were in Louisville with Mrs. B. F. Hinkle, my niece, formerly Miss Pearl Bates. I was able to see my friends, Logan C. Murray and B. F. Warfield. On Saturday afternoon I attended the Sunday school at the Stuart Robinson church, which is conducted for the poor children by Col. Bennett H. Young, for whom Miss Bee Bates is now stenographer.

On Monday we were in Nashville long enough to see the state capitol and some other commanding structures. Monday night we spent in Atlanta, where we had a pleasant call on John D. Babbage, Jr. We also saw the state capitol with its unsurpassed collection of specimens of the mineral wealth of Georgia and the new county court house, which is nearing completion, at a cost of a million and a half.

We spent a day in Jacksonville and are now to stay about four days at St. Augustine and return by the same leisurely plan. We spent two days on the way at Chattanooga, where we found Dr. William Howard in good health, but still longing to be back in Breckenridge county. Charles Howard is doing well in the employ of the Gulf Refining Co. We expect to make them a longer visit on our return trip.

Some things we had never seen and did not know that we would ever see were cotton fields with negroes in them picking cotton, turpentine trees running, the ostrich farm, the alligator farm, orange trees with oranges on them and the old Spanish city.

Sincerely yours,
S. C. BATES,
St. Augustine, Fla.

As he knew not their names he was obliged to call them by their letter when he wanted their services, which in due time gave him the requisite degree of literature for the exercise of the royal functions.

Russian's Prayer For His Horse

The Russians are in the habit of using the following prayer for their horses before going into action:

"And for these also, O Lord, the humble beasts who with us bear the burden and heat of the day and offer their guileless lives for the well being of their countries, we supplicate Thy great tenderness of heart, for Thon has promised to save both man and beast, and great is Thy loving kindness, O Master, Saviour of the world. Lord have mercy."

Those also who have traveled over some of the wide spaces of Russia and Siberia will appreciate the simple trust shown in it, for Russians have often to face dangers alone on horseback in their great country even in times of peace.
